For all of you who are grandparents...

DID YOU KNOW?

As a grandparent, your role is unique and important. You are not just “another babysitter.”

You have a fundamental connection, providing the continuity between generations that your grandchild will come to understand and respect

At a Grantee Coordination meeting where branding and social media training were the topics several months ago, there was a conversation about how grantees could partner/coordinate with First Things First in social media. The conversation ran around the cul-de-sac a couple of times but went nowhere.

The other day, our grantees with Navajo County Public Health Services District informed us that they had created a Facebook page. Kate sent me the link and asked if it was possible to have the First Things First Facebook page “like” the grantee’s page. Tiffany asked a couple of questions about the FTF presence on their page which I answered and shared the link and she “liked” the page on behalf of FTF! I am super excited about this new way to partner our grantees with FTF in social media!!

DID YOU ALSO KNOW?

The First Things First Facebook page has links to wonderful articles and videos that are beneficial to parents, grandparents and caregivers!
